

Who has to follow the Disability Standards for Education 2005 (DSE)?

All education providers must follow the DSE. Education providers are people and places that provide education or training.

This includes:

- early childhood education and care services
- primary schools

- vocational education and training (VET) providers, including TAFEs
- higher education providers, including universities
- adult and community education providers.

The DSE explain what education providers must do to support and protect students with disability.
